Observer Training Workbook

Revised 8/2023

What's Inside

In this workbook you'll find all the information needed to successfully implement the Professional Growth System (PGS). The workbook is divided into four parts:

1. The Professional Growth System Process
2. The Professional Growth Rubrics
3. Training Documents
4. Additional Resources

It is our goal for participants to have a thorough understanding of the PGS process. While this training is meant as an introduction to the system itself, it must be noted that the majority of our time will be focused on the following objectives:

- Understand the objectives and procedures of the PGS
- Collect and categorize effective evidence to support educator growth rubrics
- Develop and practice coaching and conferencing skills to meaningfully support educators

It is essential for educators, administrators, peers, and/or third-party observers to understand the PGS and how it fits within Mississippi's efforts to advance student learning through effective teaching and leading.

We encourage you to use this Mississippi Professional Growth System Observer Training Workbook in order to enhance both your training experience and observation practice moving forward.

Introduction

How the Professional Growth System Connects to Our Broader Goals

The Mississippi State Board of Education's Strategic Plan outlines clear goals for advancing public education in the State of Mississippi. Goal 4 of the strategic plan specifically addresses teacher and leader effectiveness by ensuring that "every school has effective teachers and leaders."

VISION: To create a world-class educational system that gives students the knowledge and skills to be successful in college and the workforce and to flourish as parents and citizens

MISSION: To provide leadership through the development of policy and accountability systems so that all students are prepared to compete in the global community

Goals:

1. All Students Proficient and Showing Growth in All Assessed Areas
2. Every Student Graduates from High School and Is Ready for College and Career
3. Every Child Has Access to a High-Quality Early Childhood Program
4. Every School Has Effective Teachers and Leaders
5. Every Community Effectively Using a World-Class Data System to Improve Student Outcomes
6. Every School and District Is Rated "C" or Higher Teacher Growth Rubric

Teacher Growth Rubric

Research shows that within schools, teachers play the most important role in student learning. In their critical role, teachers need feedback and high-quality learning experiences to continuously improve their practice and student learning. This feedback and support should be based on a shared understanding and ongoing support of best practice.

With input from hundreds of educators, a statewide team of teachers and leaders designed the Mississippi Educator and Administrator Professional Growth System (PGS) to help ensure that teachers receive the high-quality feedback necessary to support the growth they must maintain. This system is also intended to provide districts and the Mississippi Department of Education (MDE) with data to strengthen decision-making to ensure that teachers are better prepared, supported, and retained to improve teaching and learning for all students.

Professional Growth System Goals

The following are the goals of the Professional Growth System:

- Provide a shared vision for high-quality teaching and learning and guide educators in improving their practice
- Encourage regular, evidence-based observation and feedback for all teachers
- Support teachers and school leaders in identifying priorities for strengthening practice
- Serve as a guide for teachers as they reflect upon their own practices

Teacher and Principal/Observer Responsibilities

Teacher Responsibilities:

- Know and understand the Teacher Growth Rubric domains, standards, and indicators
- Understand the observation process
- Prepare for and fully participate in each component of the observation process
- Develop strategies to improve teaching practice in areas individually or collaboratively identified
- Implement strategies to improve teaching practice in areas individually or collaboratively identified

Principal/Observer Responsibilities:

- Complete the MDE's observer training to understand and implement the Teacher Growth Rubric with fidelity and consistency
- Know and understand the Teacher Growth Rubric domains, standards, and indicators
- Supervise the observation process and ensure that all steps are conducted according to the process
- Identify the teacher's strengths and areas for growth and provide specific, actionable feedback for improving practice
- Ensure that the Summative Observation Rating accurately reflects teaching practice

Observers

Local school districts have the discretion to designate administrators and educators to perform observations within their school district. All observations and feedback conversations must be performed by licensed educators or administrators who have successfully completed all MDE training requirements.

The Observation and Feedback Cycle

The purpose of the PGS is to support all educators in strengthening practice. This purpose is achieved through the cycle of classroom observations, feedback, adjustments in practice, and follow-up to support the growth of teachers. The Observation and Feedback Cycle will ensure that teachers receive regular observations to provide accurate and meaningful feedback. Each observation should be followed by clear, specific, actionable, and timely feedback to improve practice. Observers should follow up to ensure feedback is effectively implemented and to provide additional assistance if necessary. This cycle provides teachers with continuous feedback.

The Observation and Feedback Process

COLLECT

The observer looks for relevant evidence in a lesson.

SORT

The observer organizes evidence by rubric standards.

INTERPRET

The observer determines records performance levels by aligning from evidence to rubric indicators.

PROVIDE FEEDBACK

The observer uses evidence to ground discussion with the teacher on improving practice.

The Observation and Feedback Process is not a mystery. This is the four-step process for collecting evidence to support feedback conversations. These steps should be followed when observing teaching. This process represents best practice and is not intended to be burdensome but provide observers with a clear process to make identifying high-quality feedback easier. As observers gain experience and expertise with the Teacher Growth Rubric, collecting and sorting evidence can be done simultaneously.

COLLECT: An observer looks for and records relevant evidence from a lesson.

SORT: The observer organizes the evidence by standards.

INTERPRET: The observer determines performance levels by aligning the evidence to the rubric's indicators.

PROVIDE FEEDBACK: The observer uses evidence in discussion with the teacher on how to improve practice.

Classroom Observations and Feedback Conversations

Classroom Observations

Classroom observations provide a view of teaching practice and the opportunity to collect evidence to assess practice using the Teacher Growth Rubric. Archer, Cantrell, Holtzman Joe, Tocci, & Wood (2016) wrote:

Evidence is the basis of fair evaluation and meaningful feedback. Evidence is what grounds agreement on the quality of practice, as well as the conversation about how to improve. When an observer calls attention to specific actions that took place in a lesson, it demystifies the reasons why a specific performance rating is warranted and provides a clear starting point for discussing how to implement changes. A piece of evidence is an objective description of something observed in a lesson. It makes no suggestion of quality (p. 128).¹

Classroom observations serve as a snapshot of practice captured through watching teaching and providing feedback on what is observed. Observations, both informal and formal, should be of sufficient length so that the observer can analyze the lesson and accurately collect evidence. Time between observations must be sufficient for teachers to improve their practice using the action steps identified during the feedback conversation. If the teacher needs support(s) to improve his/her teaching practice (i.e., coaching and professional learning opportunities), then the time between observations must be sufficient for the teacher to have had the opportunity to access appropriate supports.

Classroom Observations

$$3 \text{ minimum per school year} = 2 \text{ Informal (unannounced)} + 1 \text{ formal (announced)}$$

High-quality
feedback after each observation

Informal/Walk-through Observations

Research clearly indicates that adults, including educators, need regular feedback to strengthen practice. Informal observations/walk-throughs are unannounced classroom observations that support the collection of evidence to provide high-quality feedback to teachers about specific lessons. One of the important findings of the Measures of Effective Teaching (MET) Project sponsored by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation was that 15-minute classroom observations were as effective as observations of 45 minutes.² The informal/walk-through observations should occur throughout the school year. Two informal observations are required. Beyond the required two, the frequency and length of time of the informal/walk-through observations are at the discretion of the school district. While two is a minimum requirement, more frequent informal observations may be needed to strengthen a teacher's practice. A single informal observation does not need to assess every aspect of a teacher's practice, but observers should use the rubric to identify potential areas for feedback.

Formal Observations

Formal observations should be announced. Each teacher should receive a minimum of one formal observation per school year. Beyond the required one, the frequency and length of the formal observations are at the discretion of the school district.

Pre-observation Conferences

Pre-observation conferences provide the opportunity for the teacher to describe the context and plans for the lesson prior to a formal classroom observation. The teacher would also discuss goals related to teaching practice. Pre-observation conferences are not required, but are useful in building shared trust with the observation process.

Feedback Conversations

Of all the approaches to promote teacher learning, the most powerful (and embedded in virtually all others) is that of professional conversation.³ Reflective conversations about practice allow teachers to understand and analyze events in the classroom. High-quality feedback helps teachers improve by identifying strengths (practices they should continue) and areas for improvement (changes to their practice that should be prioritized). To be effective, feedback after a classroom observation should focus on foundational practices that will have a domino effect on the mastery of other practices (highest leverage), be clear and observable (not vague), and be bite-sized so it can be implemented quickly.¹ Feedback should be provided to the teacher as soon as possible after each classroom observation.

Observers should prioritize a narrow area of focus to discuss with the teacher. A focus area should be narrowed so that the observer and teacher can co-plan strategies for implementation that can quickly make a noticeable difference in the classroom.¹

Teachers should always be meaningfully engaged in the feedback conversation and not just recipients of information from the observer. A two-way conversation allows a teacher to better understand the relationships between his/her teaching and student learning. Reflective prompts provide a structure for teachers to self-analyze their own teaching and what they might improve.¹

Feedback must include more than prompts crafted to promote self-reflection. The onus for identifying techniques to improve teaching should not rest only on the teacher. Observers need to bring something to the table. For instance, if the focus of feedback is on writing better lesson objectives, the observer should come with a handful of very specific and practical techniques for doing so. A teacher who leaves a post-observation conference with something of value is much more likely to view observation in a positive light.¹

Summative Observation Ratings

Using the evidence collected over the course of the school year, the observer should apply the four-performance level rating scale to evaluate a teacher's practice using all nine Teacher Growth Rubric standards. Therefore, the summative observation rating represents where the "preponderance of evidence" exists. The summative observation rating is based upon the aggregate, unweighted domain averages. Each standard is assigned a rating of 1.00 through 4.00 points. Domain ratings are calculated by averaging the standards in each domain. The values are rounded to two decimals (i.e., 3.05). These numeric values are then aggregated and divided by four (i.e., the number of domains) to produce a summative observation rating from 1.00 through 4.00 points. Summative observation standard ratings for each teacher will be submitted to the MDE. The method of submission and submission window will be provided to districts between February or March of each year.

Summative Observation Conferences

Prior to the end of the school year and in accordance with school district timelines, the observer will conduct a summative observation conference with the teacher. During the conference, the observer and teacher will discuss the teacher's classroom observations, evidence of the teacher's practice, and professional growth opportunities. At this time, the teacher should also receive summative observation rating.

Teacher Growth Rubric Domains and Standards

The Teacher Growth Rubric has four domains and nine standards.

DOMAIN I: LESSON DESIGN - Teachers must be skilled in planning instruction that is appropriate for their students, fully aligned to state standards and reflect teaching to high standards of student learning.

1. Lessons are aligned to standards and represent a coherent sequence of learning.
2. Lessons have levels of learning for all students.

DOMAIN II: STUDENT UNDERSTANDING - Teachers build the classroom to develop students' competence and confidence. This includes a wide range of inputs and processes such as modeling, collaborative and cooperative learning experiences, and assessments.

3. The teacher assists students in taking responsibility for learning and monitors student learning.
4. The teacher provides multiple ways for students to make meaning of content.

DOMAIN III: CULTURE AND LEARNING ENVIRONMENT - Teachers build a learning environment that is predictable with established routines and procedures, one in which they know their students as people and as learners, and one in which students thrive.

5. The teacher manages a learning-focused classroom community.
6. The teacher manages classroom space, time, and resources (including technology when appropriate) effectively for student learning.
7. The teacher creates and maintains a classroom of respect for all students.

DOMAIN IV: PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITIES - Teachers engage with the professional community both within the school and beyond, demonstrate a commitment to ongoing learning, collaborate productively with colleagues and contribute to the life of the school.

8. The teacher engages in professional learning.
9. The teacher establishes and maintains effective communication with families/guardians.

Teacher Performance Levels

A teacher's practice on each standard will be evaluated in accordance with a four-level rating scale:

- Level 4 Practice: This teacher demonstrates advanced instructional practices, particularly those that foster student ownership of learning and the environment. In Level 4 teaching, a community of learners has been created in which students assume a large part of the responsibility for the success of a lesson and their own learning. Level 4 practice goes above and beyond the expectations for an effective teacher.
- Level 3 Practice: This teacher demonstrates effective instructional practices. Level 3 teaching is characterized by “teacher-directed success” while Level 4 teaching is characterized by “student-directed success.” Level 3 practices are expected of all effective teachers.
- Level 2 Practice: A teacher demonstrating Level 2 practices is making attempts, but does not fully demonstrate effectiveness. This teacher has potential to become effective, but requires clear, specific, and actionable feedback to improve his/her practice. A teacher whose practice is at Level 2 is a high potential teacher. High-quality feedback is essential in improving his/her practice.
- Level 1 Practice: This teacher should receive immediate and comprehensive professional learning and support(s) designed to address the identified area(s) for growth.

Glossary

DOMAINS: Domains are broad categories of skills, knowledge, dispositions, and related elements in a teacher's practice. Domains are umbrella descriptions defined by standards and indicators.

EVIDENCE: Evidence is a factual reporting of events that is not biased or clouded with personal opinion, such as how the observer may have taught the lesson himself/herself. Evidence may include teacher and student behavior, student work, descriptions of the classroom environment, as well as lessons plans.

FEEDBACK: Feedback is insight from the observer on a teacher's practice that is grounded in the four domains and the nine standards of the Teacher Growth Rubric. To effectively support improvements in practice, feedback should be focused and actionable – not a long list of things the teachers might change. High-quality feedback focuses on the highest-leverage practice the teacher should effectively implement and is delivered in a way that makes clear how the teacher can try out the suggestion(s) in an upcoming lesson.

FORMAL CLASSROOM OBSERVATION: A formal classroom observation is a period of time during which a trained observer visits a classroom and uses a rubric to observe specific teaching practices, aspects of instruction, and interactions between teacher and student. Formal observations are announced.

INDICATORS: Indicators are the smallest category for describing and organizing educator knowledge, skills, dispositions, and related elements in an educator performance framework. Indicators are narrow, observable or measurable descriptors of educator practice.

INFORMAL/WALK-THROUGH OBSERVATION: An informal/walk-through observation is conducted by a trained observer and is unannounced. Its purpose is to provide a quick check of teacher performance so that the observer can provide high-quality feedback. These visits are performed throughout the school year.

LESSON PLAN: A lesson plan is a detailed description of a teacher's strategy for instruction for a particular class, grade, or subject.

MEASURES: Measures are types of instruments or tools used to assess the performance and outcomes of educator practice (e.g., observations, student surveys, and a teacher's impact on student outcomes).

MULTIPLE MEASURES: Multiple measures include the use of more than one instrument or tool by observers to assess the performance and outcome of educator practice.

POST-OBSERVATION CONFERENCE: A post-observation conference is a meeting between a teacher and an observer that takes place after each classroom observation. The purpose of the conference is to allow the observer to have a feedback conversation with the teacher. The teacher should receive specific, actionable, and timely feedback during the post-observation conference.

PRE-OBSERVATION CONFERENCE: A pre-observation conference is a meeting between a teacher and an observer that takes place prior to a formal classroom observation. The purpose of the conference is to provide the observer with background information about the lesson, the students, and any other details that may help the observer understand the context of the classroom. Additionally, it is an opportunity for the teacher to ask clarifying questions about the formal observation.

STANDARDS: Standards are definitions of the specific teaching activities and responsibilities in each domain that are research-based best practices.

SUMMATIVE OBSERVATION CONFERENCE: The Summative Observation Conference is an end-of-year meeting between the teacher and observer. The purpose of this collaborative conversation is to review feedback and summative ratings from observations of practice and to identify successes, areas for growth, and next steps toward the teacher's continued professional growth. It is also an opportunity to reflect on available student data that may inform ways to improve teaching practice and student outcomes.

The Observation and Feedback Cycle: Best Practices for Collecting Evidence¹

Observe

The observer visits the classroom and takes notes on teacher and student actions.

Best Practices for Observation

1. Eliminate effects of bias. Enter the classroom without judgment and work from evidence.
2. Collect evidence, not interpretation. Write down only what the teacher and students say and do.
3. Look for learning. Seek evidence of what students know and are able to do.
4. Review and reflect. Pause to organize your evidence before interpreting.

Collecting evidence during an observation

Collecting evidence during the observation is the first step in ensuring that ratings are accurate and feedback aligns to teachers' needed area(s) of improvement. Many observers of teaching confuse descriptions of classroom practice with opinions about classroom practice. Interpretation can be a reflection of one's biases and personal preferences, particularly when it is not supported by a collection of evidence. Evidence collecting is a skill, not knowledge; it comes with practice. When collecting evidence, observers describe what is taking place without drawing conclusions or making judgments about what he or she observes. When collecting evidence on instruction, ask:

- What do you see and hear the teacher and students saying and doing?
- What evidence can you gather about student learning?
- What will students know and be able to do at the end of the lesson?

Common mistakes/pitfalls to avoid

- Distinguish between evidence and interpretation. For instance, you can identify key words that give away subjectivity: e.g., "I think," or "I feel." Be cognizant of keeping evidence separate from interpretation, using this framework:

EVIDENCE	INTERPRETATION
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Is observable• Is not influenced by the observer's perspective• Is free of evaluative words• Does not draw conclusions	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Makes inferences• Depends on observer's perspective• Includes evaluative words• Draws conclusions

- Replace vague quantifiers by capturing more specific evidence (e.g., "a lot of students raised their hands" vs. "17 of 20 students raised their hands.")
- Swap edu-speak for evidence. For example, rather than saying, "You differentiated by scaffolding questions during the mini-lesson," identify the actual questions that the teacher asked, such as "What is the name of this shape? How is it different from a square or rectangle? Where in real life have you seen this shape?"

Tips for collecting evidence

There are various techniques to collect student outcomes data during an observation:

- Sit with a table/group of students. Write down the questions asked and answers given by the students in that group.
- Copy down what each student has written on his/her paper verbatim into your observation notes (e.g. Answer to #2 on handout, response to quick-write prompt). The observer can obtain a handout from the teacher, if available, and record the answers directly onto it.
- Write down the time and circulate in the room. Record the item that all students are working on in that moment. Then, go around a second time.
- Select a problem, determine the correct answer, and tally the number of students who have the correct response written on their papers.
- If recording observation notes using an iPad, use the iPad to take pictures of actual student work during the classroom observation.
- Move around the classroom and identify students performing at high, medium, low levels and strategically capture their work.
- Monitor observation notes to ensure that the “student side” is not neglected.
- Ask students to tell you what they are learning/doing, why they are learning, and if they have learned anything new today.
- Collect the lesson plan and/or copies of student work prior to leaving the classroom.

How do I capture as much evidence as possible?

- Effective evidence collection can be done using scripting, coding, and anecdotes.
 - SCRIPTING – writing down teacher and/or student language verbatim
 - CODING – using shorthand to increase how much can be written and the quality of data collected (T= teacher, S= student, HU= hands up)
 - ANECDOTES – brief descriptions about “who did what” and other important information without specifics about what was said
- Time transitions by using time stamping. Time stamping helps to record more accurate information about the flow of a lesson. Time stamping also provides information about lesson pacing and the duration of activities/learning experiences.

TIME STAMP EXAMPLES
Time	Teacher/Student Actions
9:15	T says to class “Let’s get with our partners and think about what we just discussed.”
9:20	Ss found partners and began discussion of story.
9:40	After two claps, all partners ended their discussions and looked at the T.

- Copy learning target, or make a note if it is not posted.
- Draw circles to represent groups of students or teacher interaction with students.

- If you notice a trend, create a tally on the side, so you can capture other evidence that may be occurring while also documenting the trend. For example, Jane is the only one responding to the teacher's questions. You may capture several instances verbatim, but you can also capture how many times it occurs if you can't capture everything Jane said.

Jane is called on |||| |

Times teacher provides feedback to front table |||

- When appropriate, collect full interactions:
 - When teacher did __, student __. When student said __, teacher said __.

Classroom Observation Evidence Collection Samples: Strong versus Weak

Strong example class observation evidence collection:

Time	Teacher Actions	Student Actions
1:00	T says to walking students, "You need to be on the rug in 3-2-1."	24 Ss on the carpet facing the front of the room. 3 Ss walking around the classroom. As T said "one" Ss joined classmates.
1:01	T asked, "How many days are there in the week?" T repeated question and then said, "Anyone?" T asked Ss to stand and led them in "The Days of the Week" song.	5-6 Ss spoke to each other when T spoke. T called on Terrence who said "7." 16 of the 27 Ss stood up for the song.
1:02	T asked, "What day comes after Saturday?"	Steven shouted out, "Monday!" Most Ss laughed – 2 boys physically rolled around and knocked over 2 girls. Steven walked away from the group and sat in the opposite corner of the classroom.
1:03	T: "Ok, boys and girls, if you hear my voice clap once, if you hear my voice clap twice."	After two claps, all but 2 boys were quiet and looking at her.

Weak example classroom observation evidence collection:

Time	Teacher Actions	Student Actions
1:00		Ss on carpet during mini-lesson. Lots of Ss walking around the classroom while the T tried to get their attention.
1:01	T asked questions about the calendar.	Many Ss were not listening while the teacher reviewed the days of the week.
1:02		Steven called out over and over again when you asked the question about the days of the week.
1:03		Steven walked away from the group and the class fell apart.
1:04	Mini-lesson is not successful. Little student learning accomplished as teacher has no classroom management skills.
1:05	Poor classroom management continues through sloppy transitions from carpet to desks.	Several students are talking to one another.
1:06	The teacher seemed to be okay with this.	A few students go to the round table. Some start reading and some don't.

Unbiased Evidence: Just the Facts

Verbatim scripting of teacher or student comments:

- "Would one person from each table come to collect the materials?"
- "We have five more minutes to finish. Let's look over our work before we hand it in."

Non-evaluative statements of observed teacher or student behavior:

- The teacher stood by the door, greeting students as they entered.
- Students were seated at tables in groups of four, working independently.

Numeric information about time, student participation, resource use, etc.

- Three students offered 80% of the comments during the discussion.
- Fifteen minutes were spent in circle time.

An observed aspect of the environment

- The assignment was on the board for students to work while attendance was being taken.
- There were three centers designed for independent work.

Collecting Strong Evidence

Bias Errors

A bias rating error is any attitude or tendency to respond in a certain way, or an inconsistency on the part of the evaluator which impedes objectivity and accuracy in the evaluation process. There are a number of biases that may affect judgements both positively and/or negatively. None of these influences, if should be noted, are directly related to teaching effectiveness, but they can subconsciously affect your judgement as an observer if you do not engage in objective evidence collection.

First Impression Error

The tendency of a rater to make an initially favorable or unfavorable judgment about a person and ignore or distort subsequent information so as to support the initial judgement. For example: Mrs. A's desk is really neat and well-organized, so the rater assumes a well-managed classroom. Mr. B's shirt is always untucked, so the rater looks for other examples of sloppy performance.

Halo/Horns Error

The tendency of a rater to make generalizations from one aspect of a person's performance to all aspects of a person's job performance. For example, Mr. Z always volunteers for extracurricular tasks, so the rater sees only the positive performance examples in his classroom. Ms. H loses instructional time repeating directions, so the rater looks for other gap areas in her classroom.

Compare/Contrast Error

The tendency of a rater to evaluate a person relative to other individuals rather than how well the person fulfills the requirements of the job. For example: Mrs. T uses the same routines in her classroom as Mrs. V who is a master teacher. The rater generalizes from this similarity and looks for additional positive examples during her observation. Mr. G is the only teacher who did not participant in the voluntary staff development session. The rater's negative judgement about his absence influences the observation of the classroom.

Similar/Dissimilar to Me Errors

The tendency of a rater to evaluate more favorably those people whom they perceive as similar to themselves. For Example: Mrs. J has created a classroom that is just like the rater's last classroom. Therefore, the rater is more likely to look for positive examples during an observation. Mr. D frequently reads the same books as the rater. This leads the rater to view Mr. D's performance more positively. Mrs. A has a similar accent to the rater. This leads the rater to view Mrs. A in a positive light.

Central Bias Error and/or Negative-Positive Errors

The tendency of a rater to score people either at the extreme ends of a scale (too harshly or leniently) or close to the midpoint of a scale when their performance justifies a substantially higher or lower rating. For example: The rater never gives more than a 2 on anything or always gives 3s on everything.

I Know You Error

The tendency of a rater to allow previous history or present relationship to influence the score. For Example: Mr. L has a long-standing friendship with the rater, as they formerly co-taught a humanities course. As a result, the rater is likely to look for positive performance examples. Mrs. P is argumentative during staff meetings, so the rater is likely to look for negative examples in her classroom.

Emotional State Error

The tendency of a rater to allow their present emotional state to influence the score. For Example: The rater had an argument with their teenage daughter before leaving for work and resulting mood causes a negative lens on their observations. The rater got engaged over the weekend and their good mood influenced their observations positively.

Tips for Avoiding Bias

All performance ratings should be established against fixed standards, not compared to previous performances, the ratings of others, initial impression or any factors other than the observable evidence and the specific rubric.

Some tips to guide non-biased observation include:

- Practice collecting unbiased, or “just the facts” evidence through:
 - Verbatim scripting of teacher or student comments
 - Non-evaluative statements of observed teacher or student behavior
 - Numeric information about time, student participation, resource use, etc.
 - Observed aspects of the environment
- Consider whether the person has done anything unusually good or bad in the last few months and whether this might be influencing your perspective regarding their job performance.
- Ask yourself whether you feel the person has a particularly pleasant or unpleasant personality and whether this might be influencing your perspective regarding their job performance.
- Remember that it is unlikely that any staff either “exceeds expectations” or “needs improvement” in every standard.
- Study your ratings to determine whether you might be giving higher ratings to individuals more similar to yourself. Be particularly alert for this problem when rating a staff member who is a good friend or with whom you socialize.
- Study your ratings to determine whether you might be giving lower ratings to staff members who are very dissimilar to you or whom you dislike.

Attending to Details in Characterization

Teacher D is a 7th grade teacher with 15 years of experience in education, as a teacher and literacy coach. This year she has been working on building student ownership of their learning, specifically around the use of self-assessment and reflection.

In this lesson, students are introduced to the new unit through a read-aloud activity and given practice opportunities to use a “jotting” strategy while reading.

This lesson is the beginning of a new unit investigating characterization through author studies. Please refer to the lesson materials for more contextual details.

Investigating Characterization Session 1- Read Aloud, Attending to Details that Illuminate Perspective

In this session...
Teacher	Students
Today you'll launch the bend with a read-aloud in which you especially show students how to read with attentiveness, alert to the ways that authors insert details at the start of a story that help the reader begin to understand the perspective of the main character(s).	Will spend most of the session participating in the extended read-aloud. Students will talk intermittently with a partner. If there is time after the read-aloud, students will transfer the readerly skill you demonstrated to the short texts they are reading. If there is time after the read-aloud, students will transfer the readerly skill you demonstrated to the short texts they are reading.

Anchor chart - When Investigating Perspective, Readers Consider: Lean-in comments to encourage readers' independence and engagement to encourage enthusiasm 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Reading notebook, sitting in partnerships

Lesson
This is a read-aloud session, but you will not be reading the entire text today. Be sure to review the annotated text to be aware of what is to be read today.
Introduce the work with a mini keynote, talking about why readers commit to books by an author.	What authors have you liked, even as a kid? -- share some ideas with a partner in this unit, you're going to become experts in the work of some great authors. Question you will likely be asking yourself as you read -- What is it that makes these writers' stories so compelling?
Introduce the specific work of the unit (studying characterization) and the first bend (studying perspective).	In the first bend of the unit, you'll be reading short stories by different authors. Then, you'll choose one of those authors to stay with and read a novel by that same person. You'll study characterization - how authors develop characters.
Shift to introducing the story that you'll read aloud, and the work that you'll begin today.	"To understand a character's perspective, readers pay attention to details—especially details that show what a character needs or desires and what barriers get in their way. When you notice details about what a character wants, and what gets in his or her way, you begin to better understand the perspective of a character."
Conducting the Read Aloud
Introduce the read-aloud text, and an inquiry lens that leads readers to investigate the perspective of main characters.	We're going to read "How to Transform an Everyday, Ordinary Hoop Court into a Place of Higher Learning and You at the Podium" by Matt de la Pena.

	Read with these questions in mind -- show the beginning of an anchor chart for the bend (page 10). Let's see what we find out about the main character in this story. You may want to jot as you listen, so you can capture any details or phrases that stand out. Or listen closely and then jot. Either way, make sure you jotting about the characters in the story.
... follow the read-aloud annotated text, with the pauses and turn and talks noted in the lesson (and the annotated text) on pages 10-16.
Recap the thinking work students did, how they attended to details that illuminate a character's perspective.	"You did some significant thinking there. You didn't wait for the author to say, 'So this shows that the narrator is Mexican, and his perspective is that being Mexican can bring trouble with the police in this place.' Because the author is never going to be that explicit. Instead, in great stories, authors give you these subtle details that let you gain insight into the character's perspective, if you're alert.
Link
Charge students to read their own stories with heightened awareness, to pay attention to details that help them better understand their main characters' perspectives.	Matt de la Pena layers details to help you better understand the perspective of the character and he paces these details out, giving the reader just a bit, then a bit more, letting you hear what the narrator is thinking so you see the world through his eyes. Other authors you are reading do it differently. They might give you a character's backstory or they might use dialogue to give details. It will be interesting to compare what you learn about your character but also how you learn-how these authors layer detail. You'll have a little bit of time to read a story you and your partner chose and finish it tonight. Collect important details about these stories -- you can write on them. Use the anchor chart to guide your thinking (page 17).
Workshop Time- Independent Reading
Teacher <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Circulate to stimulate enthusiasm • Observe partnerships for who is working well together, who may need support, or who may need changed. • Use the "Lean-In Comments to Encourage Readers' Independence and Engagement" for suggested comments to readers. 	Student <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • "Launching the unit with independence on the front burner" • Reading short stories in partnerships, using the anchor chart to focus their thinking in their WAR.
Share
Rally students to set ambitious reading goals for where they want to be by tomorrow's workshop. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Share one insight with your partner that you had in your story • Think about the work you want to do tonight - thinking work and the amount of reading. Students should finish at least one story by workshop tomorrow.
Homework
Get a lot of reading done. Finish the story you started today, or if it is particularly long, make steady progress in it. As you read, do the work we did in class -- notice what your characters want, what gets in their way, and any experiences that shape their perspective. or write on the story while you read.

3. Investigating Characterization Unit Planning Notes

Note: This teacher uses Reading Workshop, in which the parts or sections of a unit of study are referred to as “bends.”

To consider/organize before starting the unit...

- Students should be in partnerships - these can be self-selected, but they will work with partners throughout the unit. Ideally, these are partnerships that are on similar reading levels to allow them to read the same texts.
- Students should be reading 3-5 short stories in bend 1, depending on the student. Make sure to have multiple copies of these stories readily accessible.
- For every short story author in bend 1, be sure there is a novel by that same author available for bend 2.
- Students will start novels in bend 2, so be sure to have novels to share with students for their selection by session 6.

In bend 1...

- “You’ll be pushing students to consider perspective in deeper ways, exploring how their own perspectives as readers, as well as the perspectives of characters, are shaped by choices the author made” (2).
- Students should read 3-5 short stories each.
- Read the anchor text aloud - students do not need a copy. They should be using their active listening skills and note-taking to engage in the text.
- Anchor text is Matt de la Pena’s, “How to Transform an Everyday, Ordinary Hoop Court into a Place of Higher Learning and You at the Podium”. It is a longer story and should be read in parts over the three bends. It is not to be read in one sitting at the beginning of the unit.
- With Session 6, have students rank order their novel choices (1-3) for book clubs. Do your best to pair the right book to each student based on reading level, interest, social dynamics of the group, etc.
- Students get their novels for bend 2 in Session 7.

In bend 2...

- “You’ll invite students to explore the particular style of the author they are reading—in particular how this author tends to develop characters” (60).
- Students need a copy of their novel to take with them to read outside of class. The expectation should be clear that they are to read outside of class, quickly. Students should establish a reading calendar for themselves with their book clubs. They should read the book in 4-5 days, hopefully giving them time to read a second novel by their same author.

In bend 3...

- “You’ll move them toward the sophisticated, intellectual work of analyzing not just how the authors shape characters, but how the authors shape readers’ relationships with characters” (114).

For the end of the unit...

- Engage students in a celebration and reflection of their work. Suggestion is to set up clubs to create digital author talks to introduce their author and his or her work to their classmates. One goal of this should be to attract readers with what’s most compelling about these authors. Plan this out ahead of time to know specifically what students will do at the end of the unit to celebrate their work.

Investigating Characterization: Author-Study Book Clubs

Planning Tool: Teaching Points

Bend I A Deep Dive into Perspective

Letter to Teachers—Day Zero

1. Read-Aloud: Attending to Details that Illuminate Perspective

Today, through read-aloud, I want to teach you how to read with attentiveness, alert to the ways that authors insert details into the start of a story that will help you begin to understand the perspective of the main character(s).

2. Attending to Minor Characters and How They See the World

Today I want to remind you that readers not only consider what shapes the main characters' perspectives. They also do this for minor characters. One tip I'll give you is that since you rarely get to hear the inner thinking of minor characters, to understand minor characters you especially look for details that are embedded in dialogue or actions.

3. Figuring Out Point of View—Who Is Telling the Story?

Today I want to teach you that sometimes the reader hears a story through the voice of one character, and then everything is shaped by that character's point of view. Other times the reader gets a wider point of view, seeing scenes that the main character isn't in. One way readers investigate point of view is to look closely at how the story begins.

4. Authors Lead Readers to Epiphanies

Today I want to teach you that often, when at first it seems that a person has changed, what has actually changed is your perspective on that person. When reading, as you get new information about a character, that new information often leads your perspective to change.

5. Authors Channel Readers' Sympathy by Controlling Access to Characters' Inner Thinking

Today I want to teach you that one way authors control readers' sympathy for a character is by giving or restraining access to that character's inner thinking. When readers have more access to a character's inner thinking, they tend to sympathize more with that character. Readers, then, can investigate which characters they sympathize more or less with, and why.

6. Distinguishing Simultaneous, Multiple Perspectives

Today I'll teach you that in books, as in life, sometimes characters have very different perspectives. Readers are alert to moments in a story when characters seem to have different perspectives, and they try to better understand these differences. Sometimes, it can be helpful for a reader to role-play the mindset of a character.

7. Reflecting across the Parts of a Reading Life

Today I want to teach you that becoming a more powerful reader is a lot like becoming a more powerful soccer player. As with anything you want to improve in, it's worth taking the time to think about what you're doing well and ways to become even stronger.

Bend II Author's Craft: Analyzing How Authors Bring Characters to Life

8. Read-Aloud: Noticing Moments that Give Readers Extra Insight into Characters

Today, through read-aloud, I'll invite you to notice moments in the story that may give you extra insight into characters. You'll begin to understand that even if you are unsure why a moment seems important, if that feeling is strong, it's worth rereading, pausing over, because often these moments are windows into characters.

9. Analyzing Small, Powerful Moments to Get Even More Insight into Characters

Today I want to teach you that often, in life and in books, the smallest moments are the ones in which characters are revealed. It's important to look past the big, dramatic events to the easily overlooked, smaller moments because those moments can lead you to deeper understandings of a character.

10. How Authors Make Characters Significant and Real: Writing Techniques

Today I want to teach you that once you get to know an author well, you come to recognize that author's trademarks—the author's distinctive style of writing. More specifically, you recognize the author's ways of bringing a character to life.

11. Reaching for the Precise Words to Describe an Author's Technique

Today I want to teach you that readers don't just use the first word that comes to them to describe a technique. Just like they reach for the exact words to describe a character, they push themselves to use more specific language to describe what an author is doing.

12. Read-Aloud: Investigating the Author's Goals, as Well as Techniques

Today, through read-aloud, I'll teach you that thinking about why an author makes choices is another part of understanding the author's writing style. I'll guide you to identify the author's possible goals in trying to create strong characters, as well as to continue thinking about the author's techniques and connecting them to his or her goals.

13. Rereading and Revising Initial Thoughts about an Author's Techniques and Goals

Today I want to teach you that when you think about an author's techniques and goals, it helps to reread, and it really helps to be ready to revise your own first thinking, too.

14. "Speed Dating" to Teach Others What You're Learning

Today I want to remind you that the end goal of this unit is to create a digital text to teach others about your author's style and books. Today you'll want to learn a little more about the author's process and perspective, as well as doing your own thinking about that author. Book clubs will try "speed dating" with other clubs so you'll have multiple chances to talk through your thinking about authors and teach others about what you're learning.

Bend IIIInvestigating Authorial Control*15. Read-Aloud: Authors Set Readers Up to Develop Intense, Evolving Relationships with Characters

Today, through read-aloud, I'll teach you that authors set readers up to develop intense relationships with characters—relationships that evolve over time, just as real-world relationships do. You'll also realize that writers not only author the character, but they also author the reader's relationship to the character.

16. Authors Use Time Shifts to Develop a Reader's Relationship with a Character

Today I want to teach you that one way an author shapes a reader's relationship with a character is by shifting time—by including backstory and flash forward and by doing other complicated things with time. When an author does this, the reader is often given especially important windows into the character.

17. Investigating Verb Tense and Its Relationship to Subtle Shifts in Time

Today I want to teach you when you are investigating how authors use time shifts to develop readers' relationships with characters, another way to find these time shifts is to pay closer attention to verb tense. Sometimes you'll notice that when the verb tense shifts, time is shifting, and the author is giving you new clues about the character.

18. Authors Control Readers' Experience of Characters in Part to Develop Themes

Today I want to suggest that if authors deliberately control readers' relationships with characters, a question that readers need to ask is "why would the author do this?" The answer may relate to the lessons the author is trying to impart, to the larger messages the author is hoping to convey.

19. Moving from Themes to Reinvestigating Authorial Techniques

Today I want to remind you that whenever you are analyzing the ways an author develops your relationship with a character, or develops a theme, you can consider not only why but also how the author does this—that is, you can think about the authorial techniques the author uses to do this subtle work, often in more than one story.

20 & 21. Rehearsing, Producing, and Sharing Video Book Talks: A Final Celebration

Over the next two days, I want to guide you in developing and presenting your final project for this unit: a video book talk about the author you have studied. I'll help you figure out the content and main ideas of your videos, how your book talks will be organized, and how the production of your videos will go.

How did the questions asked in the pre-conference compare to your list?

Based on the evidence from the lesson materials you reviewed and what you learned in the pre-conference, how would you rate educator practice for Standards 1 & 2?

Are you still missing either of these standards that you could gather in your observation?

Investigating Characterization

Day 2

KNOW YOUR JOT GOAL

Looking at a minor character

Narrator's dad

→ there's something we don't yet know??

"uncomfortable smile" (8).

← defends his son to cop,

not annoyed

"And in this moment, you'll feel closer to your old man than ever before" (8).

seemingly uninterested in son's basketball skills. He won't even look up when he tells you this" (4).

I have a lot of questions about his dad. Is there something we don't yet know? Why doesn't he care about his son's basketball? I need to learn more — this will shape (N) perspective

Pause & Reflect

What did you learn from the experience?

How will you ensure the objectivity and effectiveness of the evidence you collect during observations?

Effective Coaching

Reflective Questions for Feedback are:

Open-ended

Non-judgmental

Scaffolded

Combination of pre-written and spontaneous

Active Listening Allows the Coach to:

- Scaffold reflective questions
- Provide feedback
- Paraphrase responses
- Summarize the discussion
- Read body language

Effective Coaches Avoid...

"I" statements

"I think, I feel"

"Would've, should've, could've"

"Yes/No"

Because...

It's all about trust

Resources

While not addressed in the PGS Combined System Training, the following resources may be helpful for school and/or district PLCs.

How Strong is the Evidence?

Read each of the descriptions below as though you were observing them in a classroom. Then decide whether the example represents a strong, effective piece of evidence or whether it can be strengthened based on our conversations about evidence. If it can be improved, revise the statements to strengthen the evidence.

	Descriptions of Classroom Events
1	Some students have difficulty staying engaged.
2	The teacher asked five yes/no questions within 20 seconds.
3	The teacher said that the Civil War was a tragedy for United States civilization.
4	The seating arrangement should be flexible because it is a Kindergarten class.
5	The last activity, discussion of the key scene, was rushed.
6	Ms. Q. clearly had planned and organized for maximum effect.
7	As the activity progressed, students started calling out, "What should we do next?"
8	Mr. G. noted that today's activities are an extension of the math unit.
9	The new table arrangement encourages concentration and interaction with neighbors.
10	The pacing of the lesson was too slow and caused students to become restless, disengaged and disruptive.

	Descriptions of Classroom Events
11	Students worked with partners in choosing key scenes and discussing the reasons for their choice.
12	30 of the students responded to Mr. T's questions orally at least one time.
13	3 of the 6 students in the group participated in the role-play.
14	There was too much noise in the classroom during independent work time for the students to get their assignment completed.
15	The students were confused by the directions the teacher gave for the art activity.
16	Mr. J. explained that he expects about 60% of the students to pass the course.
17	Karen, a first grader, left her seat six times during the lesson.
18	Ms. F. did an outstanding job of leading the class discussion.

23	Mr. B. said she would give a test on Chapter 5 on Friday.
24	Mrs. M. wrote the names of students who spoke without raising their hands on the board.
25	Mr. T. said, "I assure that today's lesson will be quite interesting."

Evidence Alignment

Supply the most applicable standard from the Teacher Growth Rubric for each of the following pieces of evidence.

	Scenario	Standard(s)
A	Mr. A. knows that his students have already learned about adjectives. He plans to incorporate this learning into his lesson about the composition of the paragraph.
B	The teacher notices two students texting during the lesson; she moves toward them and shows them a hand signal to turn off their phones.
C	Mr. D. suggests that before he teaches this lesson again, he will revise the written activity, since it failed to capture the essential learnings he was targeting.
D	As the students enter the classroom, they are greeted at the door by Mr. L. He smiles and converses with each of them briefly.
E	To teach the concept of photosynthesis in her fourth-grade classroom, Ms. K. asks students to brainstorm examples of food.
F	Mrs. D. ensures that her student attendance records are accurate by making a weekly comparison check of the data on her Schools dashboard.
G	During a lesson, Ms. A. notices that two of her students are very involved in reading a sports magazine. She continues to circulate toward the two, and upon reaching them quietly asks for the magazine, points to the task they should be doing, and moves on to the next student
H	To teach the concept of photosynthesis in her fourth-grade classroom, Ms. K. asks students to brainstorm examples of food.
I	Mr. E., like all the teachers in his middle school, meets with the other teachers in his grade level on a regular basis.
J	Ms. L. was concerned that her methods for assessing student learning were not effective so she began an assessment notebook to keep track of the kinds of evaluations that she administers to her students.
K	The fourth-grade classroom is bright and cheerful, with chairs arranged in groups around tables. Student work is posted around the room, and a reading corner is stocked with a collection of books.
L	Mr P. will give a unit test next week.

Apply It: Coaching Conversations

Conversation #1

Teacher enters office. Coach is seated behind desk. The coach stops typing and gestures at chairs in front of the desk. The teacher sits in a chair across the desk from the coach.

Teacher: Thank you for making time to talk with me – this should only take a couple of minutes. I think I have a classroom management problem. The kids and I just don't get enough done in a period and I'm constantly redirecting them or having to stop what we are doing because of off task behavior. You've been in my classroom, what do you think?

Coach: Yeah, that's hard for all of us at first. It gets better with time. But you do need to work on getting through your lesson plan – you're falling behind on your pacing and everything in the plan is important.

Teacher: I know and I feel awful about it.

Coach: I can find you a course to take or some articles to read.

Teacher: I'm already so busy. How am I going to find time to take a course?

Coach (holds up hands in mock defense): I'm just giving you some ideas.

Teacher: What would you do?

Coach (shrugs): I don't know. Like I said, we all have trouble with classroom management in the beginning. Maybe you could use an incentive chart. That seems to work for other teachers on your hall.

Teacher: I suppose I could try it. What should I focus on?

Coach: You've got about 20-22 kids in the class, right?

Teacher: I've got 21.

Coach: Buy one of those sticker chart posters. Each kid gets a row, each class period is a column. They get a sticker every day that they stay on task all period. A sticker every day of the week and they get a reward. Maybe they need some external motivation.

Teacher: When we are able to work, they seem pretty engaged. Don't you think?

Coach: Tell you what, try this for a month – see if it gets them working harder. Just do it.

Tom: I suppose. Okay.

Conversation #2

Teacher enters office, Coach is seated behind desk. Coach comes from behind desk and gestures to two chairs in front of desk.

Coach: Hi, let's sit here.

Teacher and Coach sit in chairs angled towards one another.

Teacher: Thank you for making time to talk with me – this should only take a couple of minutes. I think I have a classroom management problem. The kids and I just don't get enough done in a period and I'm constantly redirecting them or having to stop what we are doing because of off task behavior. You've been in my classroom, what do you think?

Coach: Tell me more. How did you conclude that you have that problem?

Teacher: We never get through the lesson plan because there's so much on it and I have to stop so many times to deal with behavior. I know it's all important, but I don't know how to handle the behaviors so we can focus on the learning.

Coach: What would successful classroom management look like to you?

Teacher: Well, we'd get everything done on the lesson plan and I wouldn't have to spend any time on behavior.

Coach: Does that feel realistic?

Teacher: Probably not, but what else am I going to do?

Coach: How do you like to solve problems like this? For example, do you like to talk to someone, make a list of pros and cons, read books about the subject, or do something else?

Teacher: Well, I do like to talk to a few people, especially when they are having more success than I am or they have more experience than me. And I use pro/con lists a lot too. What would you do if you were the teacher in my class?

Coach: Besides me, who are some people you think you could talk to for help on this?

Teacher: Well, I really hope you have some advice for me. But I also think that Mr. Smith and Mrs. Jones have good classroom management and they seem willing to help me out as the new teacher on the hall.

Coach: I certainly have some strategies you could try, but I also think it could be helpful for you to learn from your colleagues who work with the same students. So, how would you approach them?

Teacher: Yes, that could work. I'll start first with them and then, if I have follow-up questions, I can talk with you, right?

Coach: Of course. Now, when will you realistically be able to talk to them? You seem so busy.

Teacher: This is really important to me. I'll talk to them today to set aside a longer amount of time with them. I know everyone is busy and I'm feeling overwhelmed, but I'm realizing that I need to do something about this so I'll make time to talk to them.

Coach: Sounds like you're getting more perspective on this problem?

Teacher: Maybe...I'm starting to think that part of my problem is that I'm hoping some kind of fix will come along without my having to make time for it.

Coach: That's a good insight. I know there's a lot going on and it can get overwhelming, but I have been in your class and there is good stuff happening. Last week, all of the students were engaged in the erosion lesson – I don't remember you having to do much redirection because they were all so invested in building the best sea wall with their group. I think the fact that you are willing to recognize that your class isn't consistently running in the best way and seek support is a great sign. And I think you're on track to get this sorted out soon.

Teacher: This conversation was really helpful! You know so much about teaching!

Coach: The answers seemed to come from you, not from me. Thanks for being so honest in this conversation.

Teacher: Thank you. This really made me think – and I realized that I have more ideas about how to solve this problem than I thought!

Coach: I'm glad to hear that! Before you go, let's set up a time for us to meet again after you've talked with Mr. Jones and Mrs. Smith. I'd love for you to tell me what you learned, not just about classroom management, but about yourself and then we can talk in more detail about how you plan to address classroom management based on those conversations. How does next Thursday at this same time sound? That gives you a little less than a week to talk with Mr. Jones and Mrs. Smith.

Teacher: That will work. Thank you!

Classroom Walkthrough #1

Teacher Name: Teacher D
Evaluator Name: Principal X
Start/End Time: 1:12pm/1:30pm

Grade: 7
Subject: ELA
Date: November

Observations

1:12pm – New unit (Unit 2) being introduced; T has displayed learning targets. Ss work in table groups to review learning standards rewritten as “I can” statements, offering possible edits/improvements. T floats, checking in and offering clarification/support.

1:17pm – Ss share, discuss, and decide on “I can” statements for the new unit. T instructs them to write the statements on their Unit 2 checklist and place it in their Learning Progress Binders.

1:22pm – T asks Ss to rate their initial knowledge of each statement using a 0-4 scale on their checklist. Share out with show of hands (1: 10/11 hands; 2: 11/11 hands; 3: 10/11 hands).

1:26pm – T reminds Ss that there is always room to grow and that they will have chances to rate their knowledge multiple times. T explains the pre-assessment and how it will be used to help her plan groups and assignments and to help them track their growth towards mastery of the learning statements.

1:28pm – T asks S to put their Learning Progress Binders on back bookshelf (table groups have designated person) and take out testing materials.

1:30pm – T distributes pre-assessment and reminds Ss they have 25 minutes; sets timer.

Summary Comments

Nice addition having students review and offer feedback on “I can” statements – how to ensure that all students are engaged and participating? Some students seemed confused about what, exactly, to do during initial small group work. Guidelines for initial knowledge ratings? Is there a scale somewhere for students to reference? Clear use of routines – transition from introduction to pre-assessment was efficient.

RL.7.2(a) Determine a theme of a text and analyze its development over the course of the text.

RL.7.4 Determine the meaning of words and phrases as they are used in a text, including figurative and connotative meanings; analyze the impact of specific language choices, such as sensory words or phrases, on meaning and tone, including rhymes and other repetitions of sounds (e.g., alliteration) on a specific verse or stanza of a poem or section of a story or drama.

RL.7.5 Analyze how a drama's or poem's form or structure (e.g., soliloquy, sonnet) contributes to its meaning.

RL.7.9 Compare and contrast a fictional portrayal of a time, place, or character and a historical account of the same period as a means of understanding how authors of fiction use or alter history.

Students appear to have mastered RL.7.4 and RL.7.5 with very few errors on questions assessing those standards. Standard RL.7.2(a) has the least amount of mastery – need to create/find more opportunities to explore theme in poetry. Students are approaching mastery of standard RL.7.9 – question #8 utilized dialect and students who chose “A” likely misunderstood the use of figure of speech used in the stanza referenced by the question. Dig into Question 14 – perhaps with students – to determine why there was such confusion around the correct answer.

Mid-year Review and Conference Notes

principal notes

January

Teacher D

Observations continue to demonstrate overall skilled level of planning, instruction and assessment. Plans for focus areas have potential to lift more ratings into Accomplished range, pushing holistic rating up as well.

Semester assessment will provide insight on HQSD progress.

Focus area: Plan for rollout of student-facilitated conferences

- Inform parents of plan via newsletter and at first semester conferences. Provide resources on student-led conferences and questions to consider.
- Have students write a letter to their parents for the first semester conference (end of the month) outlining their key reflections. Students will organize their thinking using a reflection sheet with the following prompts:
 - This quarter, I learned...
 - I have been successful at...
 - I need help with...
 - My goal for next quarter is...
 - In order to achieve this goal, I will need to...
- During Quarter Three have ongoing conversations with students about their conferences. Talk about what they might want to include in their portfolio to show during their conference. Ask them to consider what they'd like to see as a parent, what their parents might like to see, what I might like to see. Consider adding a poster/chart to prompt students to think about this as they complete assignments and assessments and as they learn new strategies.
- Plan and deliver mini lessons on the elements of a successful conference. Make sure to show students examples of good and bad conferences.
- One to two weeks before conferences, begin preparing in earnest.
 - Incorporate work selection and reflection into bell-ringers, exit tickets, and stations. For reflections, create sheet that prompts student thinking with prompts but also allows them to write freely if they want.
 - Create time for students to present to a partner and receive feedback. If possible, allow time for students to present to me as well.

Discussed setting expectations for each portfolio

- How many pieces of work/reflections?
- Any required pieces?
- Anything formal from the teacher (besides report card comments)?
- How, if at all, does their Learning Progress binder factor into the conference?
- What will happen at the end of the conference? Can parents take anything home? Will students and their parents have a chance to collaborate on upcoming instruction (accomplished indicator for teacher's focus area)? If so, how?

Informal Observation

(with Pre- and Post-Conference Notes)

February

Pre-conference

Classes are in the middle of their writing workshop unit on writing about reading. Students have been learning to analyze craft and structure and will eventually use what they have learned to write a “companion book” that demonstrates their mastery of the target standards.

For this lesson, students are continuing their focus on

RL.7.2 Analyze literary text development.

- a. Determine a theme of a text and analyze its development over the course of the text.
- b. Incorporate the development of a theme and other story details into an objective summary of the text.

Students will be asked to work collaboratively to cite several pieces of textual evidence when analyzing how the theme is developed throughout a common text. Student groupings are based on shared strengths and areas of growth and the assigned readings are differentiated so all learners can practice the skill with accessible text. Collaborative work expectations are reviewed and refined at the start of each unit and posted in the classroom.

Observation

All students are present. Observations starts ten minutes into class. Students are working collaboratively. Posted on the front board is an anchor chart

RL.7.2: ANALYZE DEVELOPMENT OF THEME

Step 1	Choose a theme in the text.
Step 2	When and how is the theme introduced? Look for clues in: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• dialogue• description.• setting.• symbols or repeated language.
Step 3	Gather evidence of the theme throughout the text including: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• surprising developments.• changes or added detail.• when and how the message becomes clear.
Step 4	Analyze how the theme develops from the beginning to the end.

As students work, the teacher moves from group to group, listening and making notes in her conferencing book. After five minutes, she prompts students to be sure they are covering all of the steps listed in the anchor chart. Continues circulating, listening, and making notes. Three minutes later, calls for the attention of the class “I am noticing that some of us are still having trouble finding evidence of the theme and the details that develop the theme. Here are some additional questions to consider (writes them on the board as she talks):

- Is there a place where more of the theme becomes clear, such as during the main conflict?
- What was the conflict and how was it resolved?

- Did the setting or descriptive words used in the text suggest an important idea or tone?
- Do any of the characters show patterns of thought, feeling or reactions? Did they change or grow?

Groups resume working, teacher resumes her observation of their work. Students are engaged and on task, teacher redirects one student with head down during work time and another group for off task discussion towards the end of the work time. After ten more minutes, teacher asks for thumbs up-thumbs down to indicate their readiness to move on. All groups are ready.

Groups share and discuss their understanding of the theme and its development, using textual evidence to explain/support their thinking. Teacher asks probing questions to get at deeper understandings; students ask questions about each other's evidence and thinking (often with teacher prompting).

Teacher asks students to take out their Learning Progress binders, self-assess their level of mastery of the "I can" statement associated with standard RL.7.2 and jot a quick explanation of their response and a reflection of how they can deepen their mastery. Teacher circulates while students complete their self-assessment and reflection. Ends lesson with reminder that she will be conferencing with them about their progress towards their unit goals during the next class while they draft their thematic essays.

Post-conference

Teacher felt that the lesson went well – wished she had thought to have the prompting questions ready for posting or sharing with groups in another way. Those were questions they had used in prior lessons when doing this analysis together as a class, but they did not have them in their writer's notebooks. Self-assessment data showed that 9/11 students felt confident about their mastery of the learning standard. Two of the students requested more practice so the teacher met with them 1:1 during the next class and provided them with a scaffold for their thematic essay.

Learning Progress binders are going well – students are invested in them and often ask to bring them home to show their parents. Trying to think of a way to honor those requests and to provide parents with a glimpse into this work without the binders or its contents leaving the classroom. Now that students are getting more comfortable with self-assessing, setting goals, and monitoring their progress, the end-of-unit reflections will include scaffolded questions to guide student selection of pieces for their upcoming learning conferences. Teacher will continue to implement the student-led conferences implementation plan discussed at the midyear conference.

Classroom Walkthrough #2

Teacher Name: Teacher D
Evaluator Name: Principal X
Start/End Time: 10:55am/11:15am

Grade: 7
Subject: ELA
Date: March

Observations

10:55am – T asks Ss to collect their Learning Progress Binder from the back bookshelf as they enter.
10:57am – T calls class to attention, reminds them they are wrapping up their second to last unit. Asks them to review their “I can” checklist and rating progressions for the unit, as well as their progress data before she passes out graded post-assessments.
11:00am – Ss have their graded post-assessments, T asks them to graph their post-assessment score both in the unit section and on their pre/post assessment chart at the front of their binder.
11:05am – Ss share in small groups what they are noticing about their data, share out whole group.
11:08am – T passes out End of Unit Reflection sheets; Ss work quietly on completing their forms; T floats and checks in with students (given 10 minutes)

- What are you most proud of from this unit?
- Is there anything from the unit that still confuses you?
- What was your goal for this unit? Did you achieve your goal?
- What could you have done better?
- What helped you learn/grow?

11:12am – T redirects 2 Ss talking and asks 1 S to sit up (head down) (3/11 Ss); all Ss writing
11:15am – T speaking with 1 S re: reflection; 9/11 Ss writing

Summary Comments

Clear from students’ general comfort with the unit reflection process that they are used to working with their data and reflecting on their goal(s) and progress/learning. Teacher is also collecting the data needed to make adjustments to instruction in order to meet the needs of each student. How to leverage this to prepare students for facilitation of student-centered conferences at the end of the quarter?
